Explanation of Time Periods Selected

When Mairs & Power talk about the advantages of holding through an “economic cycle,” the cycle that is most relevant is the economic business cycle fluctuating between expansion and contraction. For this chart, the National Bureau of Economic Research (NBER) recessionary periods in the U.S. economy was used. The NBER defines a recession as a significant decline in economic activity spread across the economy, lasting more than a few months, normally visible in real GDP, real income, employment, industrial production and wholesale-retail sales. The NBER also calls recessionary beginning and ending points, peaks and troughs by month. In the chart, trough to trough points in time is shown.

The S&P 500 Total Return Index is an unmanaged index of 500 common stocks that is generally considered representative of the U.S stock market. It tracks both the capital gains of a group of stocks over time and assumes that any cash distributions, such as dividends, are reinvested back into the index. It is not possible to invest directly in an index.

The Lipper Multi-Cap Core Funds Index measures the performance of the 30 largest mutual funds that invest in a variety of capitalization ranges, without concentrating 75% or more of their equity assets in any one market capitalization range over an extended period of time, as determined by Lipper, Inc. It is not possible to invest directly in an index.

All investments have risks. The Fund is designed for long-term investors. Equity investments are subject to market fluctuations and the Fund’s share price can fall because of weakness in the broad market, a particular industry or specific holdings. Investments in small and midcap companies generally are more volatile. International investing risks include among others political, social or economic instability, difficulty in predicting international trade patterns, taxation, and foreign trading practices and greater fluctuations in price than U.S. corporations.

The Fund’s investment objective, risks, charges and expenses must be considered carefully before investing. The summary prospectus or full prospectus contains this and other important information about the Fund and they may be obtained by calling Shareholder Services at 800-304-7404 or visiting www.mairsandpower.com.
